Here's an overview of the perfect check.

Make it permanent: When filling out your check write legibly, Use a pen: black or blue ink. If another color is used your check will be returned for reissue.

Current date: Write this near the top right-hand corner. Use the date on which you write the check. This helps you and the recipient keep accurate records.

Payee: On the line that says "Pay to the order of," write the name of the person or organization you're paying.

Amount in numeric form: Write the amount of your payment in the small box on the right-hand side. Start writing as far over to the left as possible. If your payment is for $8.15, the "8" should be right up against the left-hand border of the dollar box to prevent fraud.

Amount in words: Write out the amount using words to avoid fraud and confusion. This will be the official amount of your payment. If that amount is different from the numeric form that you entered in the previous step the amount you wrote with words will legally be the amount of your check.

Signature: Sign the check legibly on the line in the bottom-right corner. Use the same name and signature on file at your bank. This step is essential—a check will not be valid without a signature.

1. Memo (or "For") line: If you like, include a note. This step is optional and will not affect how the credit union will process your check.

After you write the check, make a record of the payment. A check register is an ideal place to do this, whether you use an electronic or paper register.

No matter how you choose to pay, make sure you always have sufficient funds available in your checking account. If you don't, your payments may "bounce" and create problems including hefty fees and potential legal issues.
